ADVANCE OF GEN. MEADE.

The Rebels Across the Rapidan and Our Forces Near Culpepper.

NO SERIOUS FIGHTING YESTERDAY.

BRISK CAVALRY SKIRMISHING.

Speculations as to the Enemy's Destination.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Nov. 9.

Our information from Headquarters this evening is that Gen. BURNSIDE had a short skirmish with the enemy yesterday, near Rixleyville Headquarters. At Bewens' house, near Beverly Ford, Gen. MEADE yesterday (Sunday) crossed at Kelly's Ford, and made his headquarters a mile beyond for a while, and then returned to the forementioned point.

The bulk of the army is across the river near Brandy Station.

The total loss of the Sixth corps at Rappahannock Station, on Saturday night, was two hundred and sixty.

The rebels are reported in some force at Stevensburgh.

The Orange and Alexandria Railroad is completed to near Bealles Station. Men are still at work on it.

Heavy firing was heard yesterday and this morning as though occurring in the lower part of Culpepper, beyond Kelly's Ford, in the direction of the junction of the Rapidan and the Rappahannock.

The Star suggests that our army already occupies the whole of Culpepper, and believes that if he decides to advance on that line, MEADE will break up the rebel railroad at and around Gordonsville as thoroughly as the rebels destroyed the Orange and Alexandria Railroad between Rappahannock Station and Bristoe. They would be powerless to repair such a ruin.

LATER.—Officers from the front this evening state that Culpepper is occupied by our troops, and that our cavalry had reconnoitered as far as the Rapidan without meeting the rebels in considerable force. The whole of MEADE's army is across the Rappahannock, and the impression among military men is that LEE's entire force is in full retreat for Richmond, and that it will make no effort to retard our advance this side of the fortifications of that city. There is no rebel force of importance at Fredericksburgh.

LATEST.—A dispatch, received here to-night from the front, says that heavy cavalry skirmishing was going on all the afternoon southwest of Culpepper, toward Madison Court-house. The only rebel force this side of the Rapidan is STUART's cavalry, who are covering the rebel retreat.

DISPATCHES TO THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Nov. 9.

It is reported to-day on authority of the surgeons in the Army of the Potomac, that our losses on Saturday were about 400, as stated in the Press telegram last night; 100 of those who are wounded, arrived here this morning, and were placed in the hospital.

The prisoners of the Old Capitol Prison are densely crowded to-day, 1,750 rebel prisoners that were taken in Saturday's engagements having reached here up to 9 o'clock this morning.

The officers from whom this information is derived say a few more are on the way.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Nov. 9—P. M.

Information received from the Army of the Potomac to-night mentions that an aid of Gen. KILPATRICK's arrived from the front late Saturday night, and reported that that officer encountered and fought with a party of rebel cavalry near Stevensburgh late in the afternoon of that day.

The enemy's pontoon bridge over the river, directly behind their works, fell into our hands after Gen. SAWYER's defeat of the rebels, and was placed in charge of the Fifteenth New-York engineers. The bridge consisted of only five boats, and these were the same which were abandoned by the Engineer brigade for want of transportation on the Chickahominy last year.

The commanding Sunday evening was probably Gen. BURNS's light batteries and some of the rebel cavalry with guns in the vicinity of the New Hills, northeast of Culpepper. Nothing authentic had, up to 10 o'clock this morning, been received from that quarter, at which time all was quiet.

The railroad and telegraph on the opposite side of the Rappahannock were found untouched.

Our cavalry are reported at Culpepper.

At the latest accounts part of our forces were at Brandy Station, while another was two miles the other side of Kelley's Ford. Some of our troops were at other points.

OUR SPECIAL ARMY CORRESPONDENCE.

Two more Officers Shot by Guerrillas—A Sergeant Wounded—Well Served Prisoner—A Reconnoitering toward Fredericksburgh.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Friday, Nov. 6, 1863.

Disgraceful and humiliating as the fact may be, it is nevertheless strictly true, that this army is completely surrounded by guerrillas and bushwhackers and, little frowning within its lines. No two or three men can go out of sight of any camp without running the risk of either being shot or captured, because of numerous squads of the enemy everywhere to be found, the bushes having ceased to afford the usual protection to persons even when passing from a depot of supplies to camp, or from one camp to another. To such an extent is this species of warfare carried on, that no officer, with the hope of promotion at all developed, thinks of going beyond the immediate limits of a camp without a strong guard to accompany him, and the men's reckless who venture out alone or with only one or two companions are considered extremely fortunate if they return in safety. Yesterday morning Lieut. HAMON, of the Second New-York cavalry, Acting Commissary of Gen. KILPATRICK's cavalry division, while riding, accompanied by a single Orderly, from Culpeper Station to a point three miles distant was shot at and severely if not mortally wounded. This occurred almost within sight of Gen. KILPATRICK's Headquarters, and within a mile of the Headquarters of Gen. MEADE. Lieut. HAMON was so seriously wounded that he could not be moved in an ambulance, and Lieut-Col. AVERIL, of Gen. PLEASONTON's staff had him brought in on a stretcher. Three men were taken prisoner at about the same time from the train Lieut. HAMON had in charge. On Wednesday, Capt. FAUX, Assistant Quartermaster at headquarters, sent Sergeant TRACY on some business to a point near Centreville. He succeeded in reaching the vicinity of Bull Run without difficulty, when he was stopped by a citizen, who told him there were twenty or more of the enemy concealed in a piece of woods through which the road passed he was then on. Making a flank movement to avoid them, Sergeant TRACY met a Lieutenant and Sergeant of the First Michigan cavalry, to whom he communicated the information he had just received and they parted. While still in sight the guerrillas fired, killing the Lieutenant and wounding the Sergeant with him. Sergeant TRACY, who is an experienced soldier, succeeded in avoiding the enemy, and reached camp last night in safety, though he saw several squads of bushwhackers at different points. Not a day passes but what officers or privates are shot, fired at or chased within the lines proper of this army. It remains to be seen how much longer this kind of warfare will be tolerated; tolerated, I say, because the means are at hand to crush out at once and forever both bushwhackers and guerrillas in this part of Virginia.

All who read the account, published in the TIMES, of the cavalry fight near Beverly Ford, last June, will remember the gallant conduct of Lieut. PARSONS, Eighth New-York cavalry, on that occasion, then acting Assistant-Adjutant-General to Col. DAVIS, who commanded a brigade. In the first charge, after crossing the river and while Col. DAVIS was endeavoring to rally a portion of his command, a rebel stepped into the road and with a Colt's revolver fired three successive shots at the Colonel, the last inflicting a mortal wound; whereupon Lieut. PARSONS deliberately rode up to the man and killed him with his sword. So far as I know, this act has never been properly acknowledged; but all will feel gratified to learn that yesterday this officer, who is now on Gen. PLEASONTON's Staff, received a captain's commission.

With the exception of a small skirmish, near Hartwood church, with some of Gen. KILPATRICK's cavalry, there has been nothing to disturb the quiet of our front line. The enemy still have a strong picket on the north bank of the Rappahannock and seem disposed to resist should an attempt be made to cross that river.

ARMY OF THE POTOMAC, Saturday, Nov. 7, 1863.

Gen. KILPATRICK returned with his division yesterday from a reconnoissance to the vicinity of Fredericksburgh. A picket of the enemy was found near Hartwood Church, which retired without much resistance. At Falmouth, some fifty men were driven across the river under the cover of a few sharpshooters stationed in the rifle-pits along the main bank. A regiment, or at most a brigade of the enemy alone hold Fredericksburgh and vicinity, but it is believed that the enemy moved infantry toward that point yesterday. Bushwhackers, as usual, hung upon the flanks and rear of the column as it marched along, and succeeded in capturing a few of our men who were straggling. E. A. PAUL.

GEN. SHERMAN'S COLUMN.

Changes in Gen. Grant's Department—Distribution of the Different Army Corps—Opening the Railroad—Crossing the Tennessee.

From Our Own Correspondent.

EASTPORT, Miss., Tuesday, Nov. 3, 1863.

The close of the Vicksburgh campaign left no considerable enemy within the Department of the Tennessee. The National forces, within the same limits, comprised four army corps—the Thirteenth, Gen. ORD, the Fifteenth, Gen. SHERMAN, the Sixteenth, Gen. HURLBUT, and the Seventeenth, Gen. McPHERSON.

Of these, the Thirteenth was shortly afterward sent to Gen. BANKS at New-Orleans. What was to be done with the other three, has been involved in uncertainty ever since, increased by the prospective removal of Gen. GRANT. Who would have the new command? and would his programme embrace new department lines and a new campaign against Mobile, for instance, or would a column be formed for transfer to distant operations? These were questions of personal interest and everyday discussion.

A portion of each of the three corps was dispatched to Little Rock. But this did not require a large force, and part of that sent was immediately returned. It was finally determined that the Seventeenth army corps should hold Vicksburgh and the Mississippi below Helena, and the Sixteenth the Mississippi from Helena to Cairo, and the Memphis and Charleston Railroad from Memphis as far east as Corinth, or perhaps Bear Creek, thirty miles beyond, on the Alabama line.

The Fifteenth, under Gen. SHERMAN, was to take the field. This was not a fair distribution, for the Fifteenth had borne the brunt of the Vicksburgh and Jackson campaign, while the Sixteenth had been hung in quarters for nearly a year. Both armies felt this; the jocular taunts about the twelfth corps with which the passing troops of Gen. SHERMAN hailed the lounging garrisons along the river and railroad, were heard with set teeth by men who were pining from inaction. The first order was to all Sixteenth to move; but it seemed to have taken root, and after a good deal of discussion (some of it angry) among the Major-Generals, it was settled as such things are everywhere—the willing horse (which SHERMAN always is) getting the work to do.

It was at first designed that Gen. SHERMAN should open the Memphis and Charleston Railroad from Bear Creek as far east as Decatur, and as much further toward Huntsville as his force would permit, under instructions from the War Department that this would become the main channel of communication with Chattanooga. Work was accordingly commenced, and by the 1st of November the road had been opened from Corinth forty miles, through Iuka and across Bear Creek to Cherokee Station, Ala.

As soon, however, as the intention was apparent to the rebels, a swarm of their cavalry appeared on the railroad, and, receding always before our advance, yet contrived to demolish everything not quite indestructible, and multiply the work of reconstruction. Even without this ruse, of opinion, that the plenary powers confided to Gen. GRANT, who is a practical man, induced the abandonment of this scheme.

From whatever cause, no sooner had Gen. GRANT assumed his new command, and Gen. SHERMAN been nominated as his successor, than the Fifteenth corps, which had already begun to extend itself along the railroad, turned off to the left, and struck the Tennessee at this point, distant eight miles from Iuka and 270 miles from the mouth of the river at Paducah. As soon as a crossing could be effected, a vigorous march commenced, eastward along the north bank of the river, toward Chattanooga. The Fifteenth corps was now joined by as large a force as could be safely withdrawn from the Sixteenth, more, or rather to be under, Brig-Gen. G. M. DODGE, long time in command at Corinth. Means of crossing being limited, crossing has been extremely slow, and all the troops are not over. The advance is, however, already beyond Florence, and by the time this reaches you will have reached the right wing of the Army of the Cumberland at Stevenson, 110 miles from here.

It is thought that crossing the river at this point will relieve the march from all serious opposition, as there is no enemy in force on the other side, while it is hoped to derive considerable supplies of forage in traversing a country as yet but lightly touched by the desolating hand of war.

The river is open for the largest boats to this point, and would be so as far as Florence, but for obstructions which the rebels placed in the channel a year ago. It is still rising, and by to-morrow it is thought small boats can surmount these, so that supplies can, if need be, be received at Florence. To-morrow we join the column, and if what we see of the movement will contribute to the information of the public, I will try to write to you again. W. S.

INTERESTING FROM KEY WEST.

The East Gulf Blockading Squadron—Destruction and Capture of Blockade Runners—Official Report of Admiral Bailey—Wreck of the Ship Templar.

Correspondence of the New-York Times.

KEY WEST, Fla., Wednesday, Nov. 4, 1863.

A wrecked ship at Key West has, during the last three years, become quite a novelty, and on Monday evening the town was startled into more than ordinary excitement by the report of a ship ashore, which proved to be the ship Templar, from Philadelphia, laden with coal for the navy, and bound to Pensacola. When about forty miles from here, and during a strong northerly wind, she had run on a rock—a portion of the Florida Reef—in eighteen feet of water. Was assisted by the British schooner Elise and Catherine, and got off slightly damaged. She is now in port, and will discharge her cargo here.

The schooners Harriet and Hermesa have both arrived, from New-York—the latter leaking badly, and cargo slightly damaged. The bark Euchlile, and brigs Amos R. Roberts, Mary E. Thompson, Russian and Circassian are here, discharging cargoes of bricks for the fortifications.

The large number of vessels arriving here with coals and brick, mostly bring along some adventure of hay or vegetables, which keeps our market abundantly supplied with such articles.

The East Gulf Blockading Squadron, Admiral BAILEY, keep up their ceaseless rounds of cruising, and hold all the contiguous waters under an observation so close that blockade runners have very greatly diminished in this quarter. They are very much disinclined to purchase vessels at Havana and Nassau, and only take them on the most favorable terms. They declare that their losses from prizes made are so large a portion of the whole number, that it does not pay. Prizes now before the Court have become correspondingly diminished, and only now and then some luckless wight, too much oppressed to remain with the rebels, seeks to escape by loading a small vessel and attempting to run the blockade. The only prize here for the last two weeks is the schooner Mateer, captured by the steamer Sagamore, Capt. FARRING, near Bayport, Fla. She was from Havana, with an assorted cargo, in charge of Acting Master FLEMING, as Prize Master.

We are daily expecting the arrival of the naval transport steamer Circassian, and on her Mr. BORROW, our newly-appointed Judge of the United States Court, which will again place the machinery of the Court in working order. Some speculation is indulged in as to who will now be United States District Attorney, which post is made vacant by the promotion of Mr. BORROW. Curiosity is on the qui vive to see whether the honors and emoluments (aggregating about $3,000) will prove an inducement to any of our so-called supporters of the C. S. A., who, in the present political prospect of that hopeful republic, may be willing to make some sacrifice for so desirable a situation.

The health of our island continues uninterruptedly good, and arrivals of vessels and passengers are very numerous. Our hotels and boarding-houses are fast filling up. Yet there is room for many more, who are expected. We anticipate an unusually busy Winter.

The steamer Cahaba is now here from New-Orleans, and among her passengers is Col. HAMES, with five very pretty and interesting children, whom he found in that city, and claimed as slaves. Four of them are white, as any body, and all are intelligent, sing very sweetly, and do not suffer in comparison with the more favored clay. Col. HAMES intends to call on the President with them, as a specimen of one of the peculiar features of that decaying institution which has permitted the man of a favored portion of our Republic to make chattels of their own children.

War-vessels now in port are steamers San Jacinto, Huntsville, Clyde, Port Hudson, De Soto, Honeywas, ship Dale, Parent, and schooners Wanderer, Ariel and Anna. The steamer Tioga went to sea this morning. F.

ADMIRAL BAILEY'S OFFICIAL REPORT.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Nov. 9.

Acting Rear-Admiral BAILEY, commanding the East Gulf Blockading Squadron, reports to the Navy Department the destruction of the blockade running steamer Scottish Chief and sloop Kate Dale by an expedition from the United States gunboats Kokosa and Adela. He says, "Having learned that these vessels were loading with cotton and about to sail, and being apprehensive that by means of their light draft they might escape the blockading vessels, he sent Lieut.-Commander SANDS to Tampa Bay to destroy them. It was planned by SANDS and himself that he should with the TALBOTS, assisted by the Adela, divert attention from the real object of the expedition by shelling the fort, and that, under cover of the night, men should be landed at a point on Old Tampa Bay, to proceed overland at a place on MILLER's River, where the blockade runners lay. The plan was successfully carried out without loss. The vessels were set on fire. On the return of our forces, they were encountered by an armed party near the beach, and two rebels were captured. Subsequently, when we commenced embarking, the rebels opened a fire upon our first and second divisions, who proceeded in an orderly and quiet manner to their boats. The third division spread out so that the rebels could not fire into them as a mass, and returned the rebel fire energetically, and with great coolness and bravery. Our vessels in the meantime shelled the woods where the rebels were concealed.

The rebels were under the command of Capt. (late United States Senator) WIGFALL, and were so called regulars. Our loss was 2 seamen killed and 10 wounded, including Acting Ensigns RENDELL and KOHNMAN; 2 severely wounded; 5 were made prisoners. Our expedition numbered about 100 men.

The Navy Department received intelligence of the capture of the steamer Mail, Capt. GRIFFIN, sailing under British colors, from Bayport, Fla., bound to Havana. She had on board 176 bales of cotton. According to her register, she was built at Glasgow, Scotland.

The British schooner Martha Jane was also captured off Bayport, bound for Havana, loaded with nearly 200,000 pounds of Sea Island cotton. On the vessel the Captain and crew were found over $1,200 in gold, silver and Treasury notes.

FIGHTING IN SOUTHWESTERN VIRGINIA.

Defeat and Rout of Rebels Near Lewisburgh—Splendid Conduct of the Forces Under Gens. Averill and Duke.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Nov. 9.

Intelligence has been received here, dated Clarksburgh, Va., that Gens. AVERILL and DUKE, commanding separate forces, after several severe engagements on Friday and Saturday last, succeeded in driving the enemy, under "Mudwall JACKSON," for several miles down the valley east of Greenbrier Mountains, into and through the town of Lewisburgh, in Western Virginia.

After the first battle on Friday, fought by Gen. DUKE, the enemy was reinforced, but, nevertheless, the rebels were totally routed on Saturday, under the combined forces of DUKE and AVERILL. The result was so complete that the enemy abandoned all their supplies, guns, colors, &c., and fled in dismay, leaving their dead and wounded on the field.

Our men behaved splendidly, and the victory was one of the most brilliant of the war. The number of killed and wounded on our side is not stated. We hold Lewisburgh.

Capture of Two Advanced Positions by the Rebels.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Nov. 9.

THE WAR IN VIRGINIA.

GEN. LEE'S OFFICIAL REPORT OF HIS LAST CAMPAIGN.

HEADQUARTERS ARMY OF NORTHERN VIRGINIA, Oct. 22, 1863.

Gen. S. Cooper Adjutant and Inspector General:

GENERAL: In advance of a detailed report, I have the honor to submit, for the information of the Department, the following outline of the recent operations of this army:

With the design of bringing on an engagement with the Federal army, which was encamped around Culpepper Court-house, extending thence to the Rapidan, this army crossed that river on the 9th inst., and advanced by way of Madison Court-house. Our progress was necessarily slow, as the march was by circuitous and concealed roads, in order to avoid the observation of the enemy.

Gen. FITZ LEE, with his cavalry division and a detachment of infantry, remained to hold our lines south of the Rapidan; Gen. STUART, with HAMPTON's division, marched by Somerville Ford, on the right of the column. With a portion of his command he attacked the advance of the enemy near James City, on the 10th, and drove them back toward Culpepper. Our main body arrived near that place on the 11th inst., and discovered that the enemy had retreated toward the Rappahannock, ruining or destroying his stores. We were compelled to halt during the rest of the day to provision the troops, but the cavalry, under Gen. STUART, continued to press the enemy's rear guard toward the Rappahannock. A large force of Federal cavalry, in the meantime, had passed the Rapidan after our movement began, but was repulsed by Gen. FITZ LEE, and pursued toward Brandy Station.

Near that place the commands of STUART and LEE united, on the afternoon of the 11th, and after a severe engagement, drove the enemy's cavalry across the Rappahannock, with heavy loss.

On the morning of the 12th, the army marched in two columns, with the design of reaching the Orange and Alexandria Railroad, north of the river, and interrupting the retreat of the enemy.

After a skirmish with some of the Federal cavalry at Jeffersonton, we reached the Rappahannock at Warrenton Springs, in the afternoon, where the passage of the river was disputed by cavalry and artillery. The enemy was quickly driven off by a detachment of our cavalry, aided by a small force of infantry and a battery. Early next morning, 13th, the march was resumed, and the two columns reunited at Warrenton, in the afternoon, when another halt was made to supply the troops with provisions. The enemy fell back rapidly along the line of the railroad, and early on the 14th the pursuit was continued, a portion of the army moving by way of New-Baltimore toward Bristoe Station, and the rest, accompanied by the main body of the cavalry, proceeding to the same point by Auburn Mills and Greenwich. Near the former place a skirmish took place between Gen. EWELL's advance and the rear guard of the enemy, which was forced back and rapidly pursued.

The retreat of the enemy was conducted by several direct parallel roads, while our troops were compelled to march by difficult and circuitous routes. We were consequently unable to intercept him. Gen. HILL arrived near at Bristoe Station, where his advance, consisting of two brigades, became engaged, with a force largely superior in numbers, in a severe battle behind a large embankment. The particulars of the action have not been officially reported, but the brigades were assisted with some loss, and five pieces of artillery, with a number of prisoners, captured. Before the rest of the troops could be brought up, and the position of the enemy ascertained, he retreated across Broad Run. The next morning he was reported to be fortifying beyond Bull Run, extending his line toward the Little River Turnpike.

The vicinity of the intersections around Washington and Alexandria rendered it unwise to turn his new position, as it was apparent that he could readily retire to them, and would decline an engagement unless attacked in his fortifications. A further advance was therefore deemed unnecessary, and, after destroying the railroad from Cedar Run and Broad Run to the Rappahannock, the army withdrew on the 20th to the line of that river, leaving the cavalry in the neighborhood front.

The cavalry of the latter returned on the following day, and some skirmishing occurred at Buckland. Gen. STUART, with HAMPTON's division, retired slowly toward Warrenton, in order to cover the movements that direction, thus expecting his flank and rear to Gen. LEE, who moved from Auburn and attacked him near Buckland. As soon as Gen. STUART heard the sound of Lee's guns, he turned upon the enemy, who after a stubborn resistance, broke and fled in confusion, pursued by Gen. STUART nearly to Haymarket, and by Gen. LEE to Gainesville. Here the Federal infantry was encountered, and, after capturing a number of them during the night, the cavalry slowly retired before their advance on the following day. When the movement of the army from the Rapidan commenced, Gen. LONGSTREET was directed to advance down the Valley, and "finish the game of the mountains on our left." This duty was well performed by that officer, and on the 18th inst. he marched upon Charlestown, and succeeded, by a well concerted plan, in surrounding the place and capturing nearly the whole force stationed there, with all their stores and transportation; only a few escaped to Harper's Ferry. The enemy advanced from that place in superior numbers to attack Gen. LONGSTREET, who retired, bringing off his prisoners and captured property, his command suffering very little from loss, and inflicting some damage on the pursuing column. In the course of these operations twelve thousand four hundred and thirty-six (12,436) prisoners were captured, including forty-one commissioned officers. Of the above number, four hundred and thirty-four (434) were taken by Gen. LONGSTREET.

A more complete account, with a statement of our loss in killed, wounded and prisoner, will be forwarded as soon as the necessary official reports have been received.

Very respectfully,
Your obedient servant,
R. E. LEE, General.

GEN. STUART'S REPORT.

HEADQUARTERS, VA., Oct. 22, 1863.

GENERAL: After offering some considerable resistance to the advance of the enemy at this point yesterday, in accordance with the suggestions of Maj.-Gen. LEE, I retired with HAMPTON's division slowly before the enemy, until within two miles and a half of Warrenton, in order that Maj.-Gen. LEE, coming from Auburn, might have an opportunity to attack the enemy in flank and rear. The plan proved successful. The enemy followed slowly and cautiously after HAMPTON's division, which, on hearing Maj.-Gen. LEE's guns on their flank, I pressed upon them vigorously in front. They at first rallied and attempted a stand, but soon broke, the rout was complete. I pursued them from within three miles of Warrenton to Buckland, the home, at dark, ended the whole distance, the enemy retreating in great confusion.

Major-Gen. LEE had attacked them in flank just before Buckland. We captured about two hundred prisoners, eight wagons and ambulances, arms, horses and equipments. The rout was the most complete that our cavalry has achieved during the war.

Crossing at Buckland, Gen. FITZ LEE pushed down the pike toward Gainesville, while I, with the few men of Gamble's and Rosser's brigades who could be collected after our unusually long chase, moved across to our left, and pressed down toward Haymarket. Here I encountered, besides a large cavalry force, the First army corps, who relieved their distressed cavalry. Night closed upon the contest. Gen. FITZ LEE pressed down to within a short distance of Gainesville, when he encountered their infantry, and captured prisoners from the First army corps on that road also. The pursuit was continued until after dark. The cavalry force was commanded by Maj-Gen. FITZHUGH LEE, and consisted of six regiments.

Most respectfully,
J. E. B. STUART, Major General.

GEN. IMBODEN'S REPORT.

HEADQUARTERS VALLEY DISTRICT, IN THE FIELD, ON THE SHENANDOAH, NEAR FRONT ROYAL, Oct. 19, 1863.

Col. R. H. Chilton, Chief of Staff, A. N. V.:

COLONEL: Yesterday (Sunday) morning, at 2 o'clock, I moved from Berryville to surprise and capture the garrison at Charlestown. The surprise was complete, the enemy having no suspicion of our approach until I had the town entirely surrounded. I found the enemy occupying the Court-house, jail and some contiguous buildings in the heart of the town, all loop-holed for musketry, and the Court-house yard inclosed by a heavy wall of oak timber. To my demand for a surrender, Col. SMITH requested an hour for consideration. I offered him five minutes, to which he replied, "Take me, if you can." I immediately opened on the building with artillery, at less than 200 yards, and with half a dozen shells drove out the enemy into the streets, where he formed and fled toward Harper's Ferry. At the edge of the town he was met by the Eighteenth cavalry, Col. JENKINS's and GILMOR's battalions.

One volley was exchanged, when the enemy threw down his arms and surrendered unconditionally. The Colonel, Lieutenant-Colonel, and five others, who were mounted, fled at the first fire, and pushed on quantlet, and escaped towards Harper's Ferry. The force I captured was the Ninth Maryland regiment, and three companies of cavalry, numbering between 400 and 500 men and officers. I have not had time to have them counted. In wagons, horses and mules, arms, ammunition, medicine, and clothing, were considerable, all of which I have saved, and will have properly accounted for. As I expected, the Harper's Ferry forces, infantry, artillery, and cavalry, appeared at Charlestown in less than two hours after I fired the first gun. Having promptly sent off the prisoners and property, I was prepared for them. I retired from the town and fell back slowly toward Berryville, fighting the enemy all the way, from 10 o'clock till near sunset. My loss, as far as ascertained, is very small—five killed and fifteen or twenty wounded, more or less, three or four mortally. Capt. COZZENS will lose an arm, and Capt. CRUMB was badly shot in the hip. I think a few—ten or fifteen broken-down men—who straggled behind, were captured. We killed and wounded dreadfully several of the enemy in the Court-house, including the Adjutant of the Ninth Maryland; and, in the fight along the road, the enemy's loss was considerable, as we ambuscaded them several times with good effect. I marched nearly all night, and reached the river here at daybreak. It was quite full, but I have effected a safe crossing of the North branch.

Very respectfully, your obedient servant,
J. D. IMBODEN, Brigadier-General.

REPORTED OCCUPATION OF STAFFORD HEIGHTS.

From the Richmond Enquirer, Nov. 6.

The enemy are reported on the Stafford heights near Fredericksburgh, with considerable force of cavalry and artillery. It is said that the movement has been made to stop the Confederates from getting the iron on the track which the Yankees left behind them from Fredericksburgh, to Aquia Creek, when Stafford was evacuated. Whether our authorities have, indeed, concluded to remove some portion of the iron, so much wanted, we do not know, but we have trustworthy information that the Yankees think so, and believe that the work actually in execution. They have sent this force into Stafford to stop it.

THE WAR IN TENNESSEE.

AN ACCOUNT OF THE RECENT MOVEMENTS.

From the Richmond Examiner, Nov. 5.

The news from Chattanooga is not agreeable. We have at last some key to the absurd riddles of the lying telegraph, in which the Yankees were represented to have gained the southern bank of the Tennessee in consequence of a victory won from them by Gen. JENKINS. The real facts seem to have been simply these: A detachment of the enemy embarked at Chattanooga on the night of the 26th ult., and came quietly down the river to a point where there had been a ferry. Here they landed, found the Confederate guard asleep, without a single sentinel, and handcuffed them before their eyes were well open. These were the cavalry picketts! Proceeding up the hill, the enemy found the infantry pickets, also asleep, and took possession of them in a like manner. A solitary sentinel further on happened to have waked up in time to hear them and fired off his gun. The report waked up a regiment, which fell into line and fought some. But the enemy, having brought up an overwhelming force, this gallant regiment was forced to fall back. A bridge was speedily thrown over the river at the ferry, a large body of troops, infantry, cavalry and artillery, were brought over, and, in a few hours the hillside was covered with breastworks and batteries.

The idea that all this was only a movement to cover the retreat of the enemy from Chattanooga is said to have been the first word of the Confederate General. But getting no confirmation from further developments, Gen. BRAGG—an excellent brigadier—the same, we believe, for some time encamped in the neighborhood of Richmond—was ordered to dislodge the enemy and regain the ferry. The attack was made on the 29th, and was at first successful. But the Yankee reinforcements arriving, Gen. BRAGG was finally repulsed.

Meanwhile a column of the enemy had marched up the river side from Bridgeport, and had thrown another bridge across the stream at Shell Mound. The enemy now have possession of both banks, from Bridgeport Brown's Ferry, which enables them to bring their supplies by water to a point within [illegible] of the rear of Chattanooga. Grant is not limited upon the railroad for food. His troops have no longer to live on half rations. It is no longer impossible for him to feed or clothe his army. If he chooses, he can fit out his troops in fine style. Nor will his strongholds, which we have never mentioned by the name of stores, in a word, we have lost the advantages of the battle of Chattanooga. The battle of Chattanooga must be fought again.

THE RESPONSIVE FORCES.

The correspondent of the Savannah Republican, writing of the situation in Tennessee, says:

"We have the enemy's forces in this quarter distributed as follows: The main army at Chattanooga, under THOMAS, exclusive of cavalry, 60,000 men; the left wing at Knoxville and vicinity, under BURNSIDE, 25,000; the right wing, consisting of reinforcements from the West, under SHERMAN, to form a junction with the right wing, 15,000. Total 85,000. Add to this 15,000 cavalry, and we have an army gathering for the invasion of Georgia, under the supreme guidance of GRANT, of 107,000 men.

"To meet this army—to defeat and overwhelm it—will require the best skill, the highest and the most persevering and united efforts of the Confederates.

"The reinforcements—two corps d'armée—sent out from BRAGG's army under HOOD, are at Bridgeport. They number about twelve thousand men. One corps is commanded by SCOTT, the other by WILLIAMS. The river at Bridgeport is divided by an island of considerable length. Two pontoon bridges have been thrown across from the north bank of the island, and all the necessary preparations were being made to lay a third bridge from the island to the south bank. This latter work has probably been completed by this time. HOOD's pickets over Sand Mountain to the distance of eight or ten miles this side of Bridgeport.

"SHERMAN, with other reinforcements—supposed to be fifteen thousand in number—is advancing along the Memphis and Charleston Railroad from the west, rebuilding the bridges and repairing the track as he comes. At the last advices he was at Tuscumbia. Johnson's cavalry is in his front, tearing up the road, burning the stringers and cross ties, heating and bending the iron rails, and destroying the bridges. At this rate, it is the probable that he will reach Bridgeport before the first of February. He will require several weeks to replace the bridge across the Tennessee at Decatur.

"BURNSIDE, besides holds Knoxville with a force of 15,000 men. It is believed that he has, in the great in repairing the railroad bridges in East Tennessee, with the view of opening communications with the main army at Chattanooga.

The question of supplies is giving the Federal commanders much trouble. Gen. THOMAS issued an order a few days ago, in which he declares that all persons guilty of pillaging will be severely punished, unless it is shown that they are receiving rations half rations. This is significant. Some of his pickets have offered to exchange for overcoats or a pair of pantaloons, one pocket for a gallon of meal. At other points on the lines, however, they say they have sufficient supplies.

Yankee Major E. P. ALEXANDER, moved down of his splendid 10-pounder rifle guns on Lookout Point, and put them in position to return the fire of the Missouri batteries. To-morrow we shall probably enjoy a novel, if not a profitable spectacle—that of a grand but harmless artillery duel between hostile batteries, situated on opposite sides of a wide river, the center, a high hill and the other on a mountain top above it.

Hooe's division, now commanded by Brig.-Gen. JOHNSON, occupies the left of our lines, including Lookout Mountain. Hon. LEWIS's brigade forms a part of the division."

THE SUFFERING PEOPLE.

From the Chattanooga Rebel, Nov. 1.

If any peculiar property, Raccoon Mountain has a fourfold elevation in its range southwestward from Sand Mount Lookout, and commands the latter seven ten or fifteen miles south of the river, though not so high by several hundred feet at the point near the river. The enemy's batteries on Moccasin Point are some fifteen hundred feet lower than ours on Lookout Point, and all approaches to our position, except by flank movement on the Raccoon Mountain and an advance upon our rear, seem impossible. Our lines of defense on Mount Lookout form a V, the apex of which, resting on the south bank of the river, some 2,700 feet above the water; the line forming the eastern side, extending back four or five miles, and forming a junction with the line on Missionary ridge, only some one thousand elevations commanding the Chattanooga Valley below; the line forming the western side extends southwest beyond the point opposite the junction of the eastern line with that on Missionary ridge. The abandonment of Mount Lookout by our forces would not, necessarily, cause the abandonment of our position on Missionary ridge, but it would enable the enemy to open railroad communication with Middle Tennessee, and give him the quiet and undisputed possession of his present position in Chattanooga, which is probably all he desires for the present. Even the possession of Raccoon Mountain will enable him to resume communication by railroad from that point to Bridgeport, and thus enable him to establish a depot of supplies some 10 or 12 miles from Chattanooga; but in attempting to move supplies from this new depot by wagon trains he would have to cross the river twice—first at Raccoon Mountain then at Chattanooga.

AN IMPORTANT CAPTURE.

From the Richmond Enquirer, Nov. 5.

Col. CLIFF, the noted East Tennessee bushwhacker, as our readers are aware, was captured by some of our men a few days since.

The following letter from Gen. THOMAS to Gen. BURNSIDE, notifying the latter of the change in the command of the Army of the Cumberland, is not without interest. The original was found upon the person of Col. CLIFF, the chief of the Tory bushwhackers in East Tennessee, who was captured by some of our scouts, and brought to Gen. BRAGG. The letter is given just as it was written:

HEADQUARTERS DEPARTMENT OF THE CUMBERLAND, CHATTANOOGA, Oct. 9, 1863.

GENERAL: I regret to have to inform you that Gen. ROSECRANS was relieved from duty with his army yesterday, and that I have been placed in command. The Departments of Ohio, Cumberland and Tennessee have been thrown into one grand division, to be called the Division of the Mississippi, and placed under the command of Gen. GRANT, who commencing our armies under him, Gen. GRANT will be here in a few days; cannot you come down to meet him?

Col. CLIFF will explain to you my situation and my posts, and thanking you for sending him down, I long you will keep him again until we can get more rapid communication by telegraph. If not molested within one week, I will try to have a telegraph line put up to Kingston.

Our cavalry have gained considerable advantage over the enemy's cavalry during their late raids against the railroads. The enemy lost five pieces of artillery, over two thousand killed, and wounded, and prisoners.

GEORGE H. THOMAS,
Major-General Commanding.

Maj.-Gen. BURNSIDE, Commanding Department Ohio, Kentucky and Tennessee.

Col. CLIFF, the bearer of this letter or dispatches, is an old man, very shrewd and self-possessed. Nothing could be got out of him, except that heavy reinforcements are coming to THOMAS, and that we had learned from other sources. As the bold and unscrupulous leader of the bushwhackers in East Tennessee, he has been a terror to the Southern people in that quarter. Among the papers in his person was a general pass from BURNSIDE to go in and out of his lines at pleasure, and the following precious document:

HEADQUARTERS IN THE FIELD, Oct. 3, 1863.

SPECIAL ORDERS, No. ——. Col. CLIFF is hereby authorized to proceed to Rhea, Hamilton and the adjoining counties, for the purpose of recruiting for the United States service. By command of

Maj.-Gen. BURNSIDE.

R. H. J. GOUGER, Captain, A. D. C., A. A. A. G.

Now, what will the virtuous BURNSIDE say, if Gen. BRAGG should hang the aforesaid Col. CLIFF by the neck until he be dead, in retaliation for this execution of Confederate officers caught recruiting within his lines? Will it make any difference, in his judgment, if the Federal ex should be cored by the Confederate bull?

Another paper found upon Col. CLIFF is a printed address from Gen. BURNSIDE to the "loyal citizens of East Tennessee, in which he invites them to arm themselves into companies, to be known as the "National Guard of East Tennessee." As soon as they shall have organized themselves into companies, he proposes to supply them with arms, which they can take home with them for their own defence, until such time as they may be needed, when they will be called out and formed into regiments.

FROM RIO DE JANEIRO.

The United States Gunboat Mohican and the Bark Gracie—The Position of Gen. Webb.

From Our Own Correspondent.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Monday, Sept. 28, 1863.

You will no doubt have learned per brig Velasia, which sailed the 14th inst. from this port for New-York, of the towing out of port of the English bark Gracie, (Confederate Tacony Cruiser) at 4 P. M., 13th inst., bound for Liverpool, and the steaming out of the bay at 5:30 P. M. of the United States steamer Mohican, steering for Liverpool also right after the Gracie. The Gracie suddenly turned and came back to Brazilian jurisdiction upon observing the Mohican coming out of port. The Mohican returned from sea next day. As this was the subject of a rather sharp correspondence between Commander Gansey, of the Mohican, and the Captain of the English ship Emerald, and also a point of controversy between English and American residents here, to prevent any misapprehension I will give you the facts of the case.

In the Summer of 1861, four American vessels, owned in Richmond, viz., the Abigail, (now Lotti,) Jno. B. Grant, Virginia, and Fannie Crenshaw, (now Gracie,) arrived here under the United States flag, and of course with United States registers and other papers. In July, 1861, Congress confiscated all rebel vessels, wherever they could be seized, but of course these could not be seized when in neutral waters. These vessels being here in Brazilian waters, did not return to sea; but in the Winter of 1862 they were advertised for sale at public auction, and the United States Consul (Mr. Parsons,) brought the case to the notice of the Minister of the United States, who directed the Consul to publish in the public papers a notice forbidding their sale, and apprising the public that justly, the vessels were public and not private property, by reason of their confiscation; and secondly, that by a law of the United States, no vessel could change ownership or flag in a foreign port, except by a sale made in the presence of, and with the sanction of the United States Consul, and that it was not his intention to sanction the contemplated sale or his presence, and of course no title could be given.

Notwithstanding this notice, the sale progressed, and the present claimants purchased the ships. The whole thing, however, was so clearly illegal, that the pretended sale was abandoned.

Next, an agent of the owners appeared, with a power of attorney to sell, which United States laws require should be filed in the United States Consulate. The agent presented it for filing, and the whole matter thus being in the hands of the United States Minister, he directed the Consul not to receive it, because the jurat, that is, the official certificate of its due execution purported to have been taken before Supreme Court Judge, in "Richmond, Virginia, one of the Confederate States of North America." Gen. Webb, not knowing any such place, refused to treat the paper as genuine, and the United States Government approved his action, and directed the employment of counsel to oppose the proceedings of the rebel owners.

Tony, the consignees, next trumped up a claim of indebtedness against the vessels, and sued them for debts, although it was well known that there was an amount of about $200,000 to their credit in the hands of their consignees, being the freight on their cargoes out! This suit was resisted first, because it was fictitious; secondly, because the Court had no jurisdiction, the vessels being public property, which by the law of nations cannot be proceeded against in a foreign port; and, thirdly, because no local Court of Brazil can change the flag of an American vessel, which is "American soil," except in conformity with the provisions of American law.

The case is still pending in the Court, although in consequence of a partial decision, the same English house which purchased them at the fictitious sale, has again purchased them, and now, while proceedings are pending, they and the English Consul mean to steal the vessels from the United States, while in the jurisdiction of the Court, and in contempt of the Court, on the plea that they have paid into Court their values, and if the decision is adverse, the United States must look to that instead of the vessels. To this point Gen. Webb replies: "We do not want your money, but claim our vessels as a point of honor." And when he found that the British Consul had given them British papers and British colors, and procured a clearance for one of them, Gen. Webb demanded of the Brazilian Government that it should stop her sailing, at least until the Mohican returned to port, when, if she sailed, he would order her seized as United States property, and sent home, but at the same time gave the British Consul notice of what he had done, and informed him that as surely as the vessel went to sea with British papers and British colors, he should order her seized, the British flag pulled down, and the United States flag placed in its stead. The British Consul did not appear to believe that Gen. Webb was in earnest. Capt. Gansey, of the Mohican, had his instructions on the subject, and this gallant officer would have executed them in defiance of the whole British navy, or would have been sunk in the attempt.

But the Minister's duty is to circle for the Alabama, and not to remain here to watch a small bark of the flag; therefore, she has been obliged to go to sea. The pride of honor, however, has been made; the Brazilian Government and people taught that North Americans, at least, do not fear John Bull, and have even produced a stronger public opinion in favor of the United States than heretofore. The Brazilians are rapidly becoming aware of the strength and resources of the United States, and the acts of the United States Minister confirm these impressions, as he is fearlessly regardless of consequences when he deems he is right; and his countrymen, as well as many Brazilians, only regret that the Gracie had not been a little further to sea when the tug abandoned with her back to Brazilian jurisdiction, when the Captain of the Gracie suddenly, very suddenly, changed his mind and preferred going back to take a new and better start for Liverpool, his published destination—since which time the Brazilian Government have prevented them going to sea. LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

Central Park and the Winter Sport.

The recent announcement of the last Concert at Central Park was of itself sufficient indication of Winter's approach; but, despite the glorious weather we have been enjoying, one need only to visit the beautiful grounds to realize that it is close at hand, and that a farewell for a time has indeed been said to the temple of music, the green Mayo and awful Scream. Eager expectation is now turned to the skating, a sport which is becoming national, and those who enjoy it, and do not buy hotel, are anxious that the icy finger should touch the lakes without delay. Last Winter was a succession of disappointments in obtaining good ice on the parks, both public and private, for most part of the latter, their superintendents, never prepared for a frost, little if any of the improvements being referred to them, and even merely encouraging the spread of water over the ice. Expectations, etc., high that this year Winter will play no such tricks; and well-pleased we will be, as are late remarks, holding in skating, grass, the lakes and people, skating is all who can it, and all they seek of it, skating. All the right materials for disappointment, that is, the ice making experiments, promise well, and if Winter fails, Yours Another Year, the ever-hopeful Skating Club certainly will not. An American Winter will certainly put it out on the good behavior of hurrying departure—of late—and on present form it is to be hoped that some of the good, old, Winter will remain to the Merry. This will be a Winter of unusual interest to the skating fraternity, for the Central Park Commissioners have given the Park Skating Club a lease of the Park Lake, and have promised every assistance in their power to make it a success. The Commissioners have also given the Club a lease of the Lake in Prospect Park

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE REBELLION.

The Army of the Potomac does not appear to have done any very heavy fighting since Saturday. Beyond brisk cavalry skirmishes, no engagement is reported. Gen. Meade has steadily pressed forward his columns, and the bulk of the army is again across the Rappahannock, in the vicinity of Culpepper Court-house. Our cavalry have reconnoitered to the banks of the Rapidan without meeting the rebels in considerable numbers, and it begins to be generally believed at Washington that Lee's entire force is in hurried retreat to Richmond, where alone, within the fortifications of the city, the attempt to check our advance will be made. At Fredericksburgh there is no rebel force of importance. The latest telegram from our Washington correspondent informs us that heavy cavalry skirmishing had been going on all the afternoon southwest of Culpepper, in the direction of Madison Court-house, and that the only rebels this side of the Rapidan were Stuart's cavalry, who are covering Lee's retreat.

From our files of Richmond papers as late as the 5th inst. we extract a great deal of interesting intelligence. The official report of Gen. Lee respecting his late campaign from the Rapidan to Bull Run, and the reports of Gen. Stuart and Gen. Imboden are made public. In the course of their operations Lee claims to have taken 2,436 prisoners, including 41 commissioned officers. The Richmond Examiner admits that the news from Chattanooga is not agreeable. Having possession of both banks of the Tennessee River from Bridgeport to Brown's Ferry, Gen. Grant is no longer dependent upon the railroad for food, but can bring his supplies by the river to a point within two and a half miles of his camps. In view of these facts, it is no longer impossible for the Army of the Cumberland to Winter at Chattanooga, nor will its threatened advance be nullified by the want of stores. "In a word," says the Enquirer, with perfect frankness, "we have lost the advantages of the battle of Chickamauga. The battle of Chickamauga must be fought again."

Our forces in Southwestern Virginia, under Gens. Averell and Duffie, made a combined attack, on Saturday last, upon the rebels under Jackson, in the Kanawha Valley, near Lewisburgh. The attack was perfectly successful, our men fighting splendidly, and driving the enemy in such great trepidation that he abandoned all his guns, colors, supplies and wounded. Our troops now hold the town of Lewisburgh.

GENERAL NEWS.

The Board of Aldermen failed of a quorum at their meeting yesterday, and adjourned to Thursday. In the Board of Councilmen a statement was received from the Comptroller of the condition of the City Treasury. The balance on hand on last Saturday was $1,988,938 79. A statement was also received from the Comptroller of the expenditures from the Relief Fund during the fortnight ending on the 1st inst. The amount was $59,260 to 13,643 families, comprising 13,552 adults and 18,312 children. The fund at that date was overdrawn to the amount of $113,976 10, which will be reimbursed from the new half-million loan raised on the No. 7 bonds. Resolutions of respect to the memory of the late messenger to the Board, Mr. John F. Cullinan, who died on the 31st ult., were offered by Mr. Hayes, and were unanimously adopted. A communication was received from the Mayor, recommending that a request of Brig.-Gen. Hayes, to remove the Park Barracks from the present location to the Battery, be granted. On motion of Mr. Barge, it was granted on the part of this Board. After the transaction of some routine business, the Board adjourned to Thursday, at 4 o'clock P. M.

The commandant at Rome, Ga., has received a telegram from Selma, stating that a heavy force of Yankee mounted infantry had reached Tuscaloosa, on route for Selma. They are said to come from Pulaski, by the route by which Bragg's army came last Summer.

The Houston (Texas) Telegraph says Magruder has notified all the minute men and State troops ordered to Houston and Liberty, to hasten forward without delay, the enemy being already on the advance from Berwick Bay, with the declared purpose of invading Texas.

Gov. Morton, of Indiana, has issued an order forwarding all persons from endeavoring to raise recruits or to procure substitutes for other States within the limits of his jurisdiction.

Gen. Clark, who was recently elected Governor of Mississippi, is the same who was so seriously wounded and taken prisoner in the battle at Baton Rouge some months ago. He was formerly an Old-Line Whig.

In the Supreme Court, Circuit, yesterday, before Justice Allen, the suits filed were occupied in a case in which a father claimed $5,000 damages for criminal connection on the part of the defendant with his daughter—a child 8 years of age. The details are too filthy for publication.

The continued active demand for Money produced quite a panic fall in the Railway shares on the Stock Exchange yesterday. Prices went down 2@3½ ⅌ cent. from the sales of Saturday. Money is in request at 7 ⅌ cent. among Stock Brokers. Gold 148 ⅌ cent.; Exchange 161½@161¾ ⅌ cent.

Flour and Wheat were depressed and cheaper yesterday, with liberal arrivals reported. Corn was in fair demand and a shade higher. Oats were heavy and lower. In the Provision and Grocery line, there was less activity, without any remarkable alteration in value. The demand for Tallow was more animated. Whisky was salable and steady. Hay, Hops, Leather, Lumber, Wool and Wholesome were in fair request. A good inquiry prevailed for Cotton, which was improving. Freights were quite dull, and rates, for the most part, nominal.

The cattle market scarcely varies from that of last week, either in numbers or prices. About 1,300 cattle were on sale at Forty-fourth-street yesterday, and all but about 200 were sold before night, at 10½c. Gold ⅌ lb. for the best, 10c. for good animals, and as down to 8c. for poor scalawags. One or two hundred more are expected to-day, but prices will probably keep up till the close, and all the stock will be wanted.

Lady Rescue of the Late Campaign.—Gen. Lee has very promptly followed up his late campaign from the Rapidan to Bull Run, by an official report of its purpose and progress. In reference to its purpose he declares that the movement was not undertaken "with the design of bringing on an engagement with the Federal army." We fancy this theory states the purpose of seeking a battle with rather more determination than it really existed in his mind. It is quite possible that under very favorable circumstances Lee would have been willing to risk a battle; but that he sought it at all hazards, as he would make believe, is not true, and it would have been a piece of audacity of which he is incapable, if with his forty thousand men against a Union force of almost double that strength, he had done so. He was unable to find this favorable opportunity, and along the line of advance he not only did not seek, but he avoided battle. Lee's avowed intention was to gain the fortified heights of Centreville in advance of Meade. In this he failed, and the failure is thus accounted for:

"The retreat of the enemy was conducted by several direct parallel roads, while our troops were compelled to march by difficult and circuitous routes. We were consequently unable to intercept him."

His statement of the engagement at Bristoe is also hardly fair. Gen. Hill did not arrive, as Lee says, to find our force "posted behind the railroad embankment." Gen. Warren arrived by the flank, and found the rebels formed in battle line, but they had not the wit to seize the ready-made breastworks furnished by the railroad embankment, and Warren seized the position. Gen. Lee's reports are usually marked by a spirit of truth and fair play beyond that of any of his rebel confreres; but the total failure of his late campaign seems to have decidedly warped his judgment.

Jeff. Davis Deserted by France—His Present Extremity.

Close upon the heels of all the other rebel disappointments comes the announcement that the French Government detains the six iron-clad rams building in its ports for the service of the Confederacy. This is practically an end of the Emperor's flirtation with our rebellion—a final discarding. All of Mr. Slidell's arts with the Emperor and Empress, of which we have heard so much for the last year, have come to just this complexion at last. France, though excelling England in soft words, is found not a whit better in practical action. The same final rebuff comes from both; and there is now no reason whatever why the rage of slighted charms which the Confederacy has just received upon the one, should not directly be followed by another fit just as cruel toward the other.

The rebel Government, in its first year, had more hopes of England than of France. The fact that the manufacturing interests of England were almost vitally interested in the speediest resupply of cotton, that the commercial interests were concerned in breaking down our commercial power, so rapidly advancing to the supremacy, and that the aristocratic interests could not but find their account in the destruction of our republican system, naturally made England the first reliance of Jeff. Davis. This expectation was, in great measure, met by Earl Russell's precipitate recognition of the rebellion as a belligerent Power, by his easy sufferance of the building and fitting out in British ports of the Alabama and Florida, and other vessels, to cruise against our commerce, and by the declarations of almost every prominent man and almost the entire Press in England, that the war of our National Government upon secession was alike barbarous and useless. But the Emancipation Proclamation of the President with which the second year commenced, operating directly upon the sympathies of the British masses, and the series of great successes to the national cause which soon followed, constrained the English Cabinet gradually to quit its rebel encouragements. Thus in the second year, the trust of the rebels was transferred from England to France. Great expectations were based upon the fondness for intervention which the Emperor has so frequently evinced in his dealings with other nations, and also upon his need of an ally to help him through with his Mexican enterprise, which was daily growing a more dangerous affair to him. Here, too, there was for a time much to justify high hope. The visit of the French Minister to Richmond to hold conference with the rebel chiefs, and his repeated official solicitations to the National Government to permit mediation, denoted clearly enough a disposition on the part of the French Emperor to do something, at least, toward serving the rebel cause. But all this show of sympathy is now followed, just as it was on the part of England, by desertion. At the very time when "the Confederacy" most needs the material and moral support of France, that support is withdrawn. It is not the mere detention of the rams that exhibits this, but the altered tone of the Imperial Press toward our National Government. There is precisely the same change here that was evinced in the speeches of Earl Russell and the Government organs in England, when the rams were detained at Liverpool. The act itself was significant enough of an altered policy, but tenfold significance was added to it by the new language of good will and deference employed in connection therewith, toward our National Government.

Thus the rebel Government loses its last chance of external aid. The withdrawing of the favor of England and France, of course, settles the policy of all foreign nations, and makes recognition, and any other form of support, in any foreign quarter, a political impossibility. Rebel diplomacy is played out, and Slidell, and all the roving envoys, only "lag superfluous on the stage."

The other great resource that was counted upon—help from the Northern Democracy—perhaps simultaneously with this last chance of foreign intervention. The recent elections have extinguished all possibility that the North will accept any peace that does not involve a full return to the old allegiance. It is settled that the body of the Northern people are determined to support this war, and that faction will never be allowed to paralyze or seriously embarrass the Government in its prosecution. The day in which North-ern division was possible has passed by as completely as the day in which foreign intervention was possible. Henceforth the rebellion can look only to its own internal resources.

But those internal resources are fast becoming exhausted. The available fighting men are daily lessening in number, with no possibility of replacing them. The finances are but a bubble constantly inflated, and sure to burst soon. If any credence is to be given to the statements of the rebel newspapers, food is daily becoming more scarce, and insufferable privations will be experienced within the next few months in that as well as many other necessaries of life. There are no successes in the field to give the rebellion any promise of relief.

The great majority of the military enterprises of the National Government succeed; and, when a reverse has occurred, like that at Chickamauga, in no case has it secured the rebels any substantial results. The veterans in the national armies will generally reenlist for another term of three years; and a great amount of new strength is to be added by volunteers and drafted men, in accordance with the new call for soldiers by the President. The military force of the Government will now constantly increase, while that of the rebellion must constantly decrease.

In this condition of things it seems impossible that any sane man in the so-called Confederacy can much longer cherish the old delusions of its ability to achieve its independence. The chiefs, who know that they are utterly ruined if they yield, will of course continue their efforts to cajole the people to the latest moment. But there is a limit to human gullibility. There is a point beyond which the common people of the South will not surrender their common sense. It is impossible that they should much longer fail to feel the utter hopelessness of the struggle which is costing them such terrible sacrifices. And when this is once felt, the struggle will be abandoned. Individuals may fight recklessly on when there is no hope, but a whole people never. The body of men are not martyrs even in a good cause—much less can they be suicides in a bad one.

The Exchange of Prisoners.

The accounts which are now coming in every day of the ill-treatment of the Union prisoners at Richmond, confirmed, as they are, by the appearance of the men who are exchanged, are so horrible that the Government ought at once to take measures to bring about a general exchange. Whatever the merits of the controversy between Mr. Ould and Gen. Meredith may be, it will hardly be maintained that it is better to let ten or twelve thousand of our soldiers be starved to death than to give way. We believe that the real matter in dispute at present is as to the number of paroles granted on each side, and the difference in the two lists amounts to something like 17,000—a very large number, no doubt. Considering the indifference with which the oath of allegiance is regarded by most rebel sympathizers, and the extraordinary unscrupulousness which rebel leaders have at various times displayed in their dealings with the North, it is not at all unlikely that great numbers of their paroled prisoners have gone back to duty before being exchanged. It is very probable that we are egregiously cheated in every one of our exchanges. When people are in such a state of mind that their newspapers applaud such outrages as the sack of Lawrence as a "fair blow at the enemy," and approve of murder in cold blood like that of Ellsworth, as a legitimate mode of carrying on war, and finally, as within the last few days, recommend that prisoners of war be put "where the cold weather and scant fare will thin them out in accordance with the laws of nature," it is hardly to be expected that they should be very nice in their regard for such an abstraction as a "parole of honor," when given to a hated enemy.

But the question just now is not, whether or not the rebels are deceitful and untrustworthy, but how shall we best protect ourselves from the consequences of their perfidy. They have got 12,000 men in their hands, and they are starving them to death; and if our letting them die would make their captors a whit better men, or better or more loyal citizens, the sacrifice, terrible as it would be, might perhaps be well made. But it would do nothing of this kind. It would leave us just as liable as ever to be tricked and deceived by them. Against this, the only remedy is, not to trust them in future; not to parole any of their men, but to hold them when captured, and instead of making exchanges by a comparison of lists, make them by the actual production of the prisoners. Parole can only be carried on between enemies who have confidence in each other's honor, and as soon as this ceases to exist, the liberation of prisoners on their promise not to bear arms until exchanged can only tend to disputes and recrimination, and worse things. After we have allowed our prisoners at Richmond to be cut off by famine and disease, we should, even if we retaliated to the letter upon those of the Confederates now in our hands, be in precisely the same position as before, with the same questions to settle, and the same dangers to avoid.

There were reasons in abundance of abolishing the practice of paroling before this complication arose. If led in the Union armies, at all events, to a disgraceful readiness to surrender, and owing to the treacherousness, if not of the rebel leaders, of their subordinate officers and men, it robbed us of a large portion of the fruits of our victories in the West last Summer. There is no body at the North who is not perfectly satisfied that a very large number of the prisoners we took in the operations at Vicksburgh went back into the rebel ranks, without waiting for exchange. If we had granted no paroles we should have made a much more serious impression on their strength than we did. When if it had not not made in transportation of prisoners.

If, therefore, the rebels have been guilty of bad faith, the only thing to be done now is to stop dealing with them as if they were men of honor, and to get our prisoners out of their hands as fast as we can, and by any means within our reach. We have as many prisoners in our possession as they have, and why not, therefore, have a general exchange, and let bygones be bygones? There has been some talk of retaliation, but those who recommend us to avenge the starving of 12,000 men in Richmond, by starving 12,000 rebels here at the North, can hardly have considered the effect of such a proceeding on the public mind amongst ourselves. It would unquestionably shock to disgust nine-tenths of the community, as wholesale retaliation must always do, and would fall as unquestionably disgrace on us in the eyes of the civilized world. And of its effect in preventing volunteering—and this is, just now, a very serious consideration—there is equally little doubt. It certainly would not fan the flame of martial enthusiasm to have it known that every soldier who fell into the hands of the enemy would most probably be kept for two or three months on half rations at Richmond, but that if he perished of inanition, his death would be gloriously avenged by the starvation of a rebel in Fort Lafayette or on David's Island. As matters stand, it may be safely asserted that the accounts that are now reaching us daily of the condition of our prisoners will increase the difficulty of recruiting under the last call.

American and English Position in International Law.

It is a matter of deep regret that so few of our public men and political leaders have made a study of International Law. Several very foolish and inconsistent positions, into which the guides of popular opinion have been betrayed during this war, might have been avoided by a more thorough acquaintance with this science. Nor is there any reason to believe that the mass of educated people on the other side of the ocean have any greater familiarity with it. In the discussions on the Foreign Enlistment act and the rams, Parliament and the Times have shown quite as much of mere popular passion, and quite as much ignorance of the precedents set in their own Courts, as our own excitable Democracy. A few writers and statesmen on either side have examined the questions now at issue in a truly legal and careful manner; and we believe we do not commit an American exaggeration when we say that the more thorough and profound the investigation is, the more clearly do the justice and fairness of our position in regard to the rebel privateers appear. Among the pamphlets which these questions of international law have called out on this side of the ocean, we do not remember to have seen one characterized by greater legal acumen and more thorough investigation than a recent brochure from an eminent lawyer of Boston, Hon. C. G. Loring, entitled "The Neutral Relations of England and the United States." Many of the letters of which the pamphlet is made up appeared in England during the Summer, and the position taken—till then not recognized by any authority—that the turreted rams were in their very structure "armed vessels," and, therefore, not permitted to be furnished to a belligerent by a neutral, may have had some influence on the subsequent remarks and action of Earl Russell, who has at length accepted this interpretation of the Enlistment act.

Mr. Loring, by a careful investigation of our own jurisprudence, has shown that, from the very beginning of our existence as a nation, our Government has not only prevented the organizing of armaments in our neutral ports against a belligerent, but has even prevented the inception and preparation of any. He has proved that vessels suspected of being intended for such purposes have been arrested and detained, and that we have restored to the British owners prizes captured by armed vessels fitted out in our ports which had eluded our vigilance.

And not only has all this been done by the Executive, but Congress has framed a code for the prevention and violation of offences against international right—a code so simple that it was subsequently adopted (with a few amendments) by the English Government as its own.

Furthermore, by a series of citations from our decisions, Mr. Loring makes it clear that our Courts have taken the broadest and most generous view of international right and obligation. They have not merely construed it as a crime against the law of nations and our own statutes, that a privateer or vessel-of-war should be sent forth from our ports to prey upon the property of a belligerent, but equally as if she sailed with our own flag, under the guise of a mercantile adventure, and even if she were unarmed, and in no preparation to commit hostilities, provided the intention to commission and arm her as a privateer existed at the time of her departure from the United States. And even going beyond this, they have considered it as a crime merely to commence the fitting out of a vessel for such hostile purpose, though such preparation be not completed, and no injury be inflicted on any one—the fixed intent up to the time, and any act in furtherance of it, being held to taint the vessel and owners with crime, and to expose them to the pains and penalties of the law.

It need not be said what a contrast this broad and liberal interpretation of international law made by our Courts presents to the recent ruling of the Lord Chief Baron in the case of the Alexandra, where the British doctrine seems to be that the building and equipping of privateers or armed vessels against a belligerent by a neutral, is no legal international offence, "unless the ship be completed and armed at the time of seizure, or intended to be completed and armed for immediate hostilities within a British port. The statement made by the counsel for the claimants on that trial seems to have been accepted both by the Court and Earl Russell, "that it was perfectly competent for any person to build a ship easily convertible into a ship-of-war, and that ship be any belligerent Power; and the fact that the seller knew that she was to be employed as a man-of-war had nothing to do with the question." This is the English position; and the former just stated—so ably proved by Mr. Loring—is the American.

We need employ no epithets to characterize the contrast. All fair-minded men must see it in its true colors. History will not suffer it to be forgotten.

Mr. Loring not only claims that the losses sustained by our commerce from these violations of the Foreign Enlistment act and of the law of nations, must be eventually indemnified by the sense of justice of the English Government—but he claims that on their own and our precedents, they are bound to take, seize and destroy these rebel privateers. In the celebrated case of the Portuguese expedition to Tercera, in 1828 or '29, the ground taken by the Duke of Wellington's administration was, "that the expedition, having fraudulently evaded the English jurisdiction, and started from England in violation of the Enlistment act, the English Government was entitled to pursue and seize the ships beyond her jurisdiction." This was in fact done by force of arms. In the case of the Meriamna Flora, (1 Wheat., Rep. 1,) the Court says "that American ships offending against our laws, and foreign ships, in like manner, offending within our jurisdiction, may afterward be pursued and seized upon the ocean, and rightfully brought into our Courts for adjudication."

We trust that this view, so strongly sustained by precedents on both sides, will be vigorously pressed upon the English Government. In these great international differences, truth and justice may for a time be obscured by popular passions; but we need not fear, in this day of investigation and free discussion, that they will long continue so. The sound sense and love of justice of England will at length teach her the rectitude of our claims in this matter of neutrality; and to this desirable end nothing will more conduce than such temperate and statesmanlike discussions as this of the eminent Massachusetts jurist.

NEWS FROM WASHINGTON.

OUR SPECIAL WASHINGTON DISPATCHES.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Nov. 9.

SUCCOR FOR OUR STARVING PRISONERS.

A lower depth of misfortune was reached by our imprisoned soldiers in Richmond, last week. A note in pencil from one of these unfortunates reached a Government officer in high position here, to-day, representing that the rebel authorities have stopped the small meat ration heretofore served to our starving men. The excuse is that they have ceased to be able to furnish meat to their own soldiers. We have no doubt that this is true. If cattle in Virginia be not wholly exhausted, the Government's terrible system of seizing beef on its way to Richmond butchers, and paying for it in Confederate paper at its own valuation, will wholly drive cattle away from the city. It is understood here that President Lincoln is going to try to provision our soldiers in the Libby, and Castle Thunder prisons. Arrangements, moreover, have been made by which Commissioner Ould promises that all clothing sent to our men shall be delivered. Gen. Meredith will forward clothing sent by private individuals for imprisoned friends, military or civil. But the President's endeavor to feed our starving captives will be full of interest to tens of thousands, and will be anxiously watched.

THE LAST CAPTURES.

Eighteen hundred and forty-six rebels marched this morning to prison, six abreast—a procession extending from Seventh-street to beyond the Old Capitol. Other arrivals will swell the number to over two thousand. This last lot made a jam in every hole and corner of the old prison, including its capacious yard, wherein the rebels stood packed this forenoon as close as sardines in a box. The number of officers among them is one hundred and twenty-five. They say that but few of their comrades escaped across the river. Their General commanding had barely time to get off on his horse. These prisoners will probably be conveyed to Point Lookout.

RAPIDITY OF SLAVE BELLIGERENCE IN MARYLAND.

The recruiting of colored soldiers in Maryland is so rapid that the Examining Board have cannot examine and pass officers fast enough to take charge of the men. Though the Board has divided itself into two Committees, sitting in different rooms and providing thus for the examination of two candidates at once, only fifteen could be got through with to-day. Of these but nine passed. The readers of the Times will be astonished to learn that the enlistment of negroes in Maryland, slight as it is at the rate of two regiments a week. When full, these regiments will number in officers and men 1,216 each.

GEN. BUTLER'S PURPOSES.

Gen. Butler went to Fortress Monroe this evening. From what I have heard of his purposes, I predict that his military administration in the new Department will be as successful and as historical as was his civil administration in New-Orleans.

DISQUALIFICATIONS FOR MILITARY SERVICE RE-DUCED.

The numerous disqualifications for service framed previous to the late draft have been reduced in number, by an order from the War Department, from fifty-one to forty-one. Youth in spectacles will take notice that nearsightedness henceforth does not exempt. Spectacled youth, if incapacitated for field service, will surely serve their country in the invalid corps.

MAJOR M'LEAN EXILED TO FORT VANCOUVER.

The army, and the country at large, will be astonished to hear of the fate, shot out of the War Department like a bolt out of a cloud, upon Major N. H. McLean, the nephew of the late Justice McLean of the United States Supreme Court. He is known everywhere as the Chief of Gen. Burnside's Staff in Cincinnati, and as that General's counselor and indispensable right-hand man. He was the Assistant-Adjutant-General of the Department of the Ohio, in the Peninsula campaign he was Chief of Gen. McClellan's Staff for months. He is as thoroughly loyal a man as Abe Lincoln. Superabundant proof of this can be brought. Before the war he declined an important and lucrative appointment tendered him by the State of Virginia, expressly for the reason that the submitting Silver's appointment threatened to cause that State with the Federal Governments, and that he never would be charged against his country, or get misrepresented where he would seem to be disloyal against her. Now, it was the misfortune of this accomplished officer and undoubted patriot, to be arrested by one Edgar Conkling, of Cincinnati, as the object of an intensely nervous effervescence in behalf of the public good, and the opportunity for a personal display of zeal of the most sensational description. He actually followed Maj. McLean in a newspaper as an official "and thoroughly loyal," basing the impudent and scurrilous charge upon the all-equal fact that the Major did not vote for the Union candidates at the recent Ohio election! The Major answering this strange attack by showing that he was not a citizen of Ohio, and, therefore, had no right to vote in that State. Unshaken by this reply, which should have been stunning, Conkling assailed Major McLean again in the newspaper, and, thoroughly fanatical in his fancy that the officer was disloyal, devoted days to obtaining signatures to a petition addressed to Secretary Stanton, setting forth that McLean was notoriously "secesh" in his sympathies, and demanding his removal from office. And with his unswerving integrity he not a word many signatures to this petition—some of them of gentlemen who knew better than to sign it. The document was forwarded to the War Department directly. Immediately on its receipt Secretary Stanton issued an order to Department Commander Major Gen. Burnside, and directing him to report in person and without delay to some unknown Brigadier-General at Fort Vancouver, Washington Territory!

Long Island Historical Society.

Only a little more than five months ago, Rev. Dr. Stearns, Judge Greenwood, Prof. Werr and a few others, met to form the nucleus of this Society. It was felt that the treasures of historic matter, which lay thickly strewn along the cycle of more than a century and a half, of Long Island's history—in its original Indian tribes, in its Revolutionary scenes, and in the lives of its many noted and able men, who have passed away, should be gathered and embodied in lasting form while within reach. This began, the Society could extend its scope into a wider range of inquiry. The sixth regular monthly meeting was held on Thursday evening last, the President, Judge Greenwood in the chair. The report of Rev. Dr. Stearns, Chairman of the Executive Committee, showed its progress to have exceeded each other in the little of such Societies. It engaged at once the earnest cordial labors and received the liberal voluntary donations of the best men of all the intelligent classes of the City. It already numbers more than four hundred members. Its library contains 1,200 volumes and pamphlets, 3,000 of these being bound volumes. The library of Albert Brevoort, Esq., containing a full set of Congressional documents for a long period—about 300 volumes—being for sale, Mr. J. R. Carrington had liberally given the $500 asked for them, and the Society should open place them on its shelves. Mr. Brevoort had rare opportunity to make a complete set, being long Secretary of the Senate, and more than forty years resident at Washington. The Committee had been empowered to issue and add a large circle of recent in room of those occupied, which would be ready for the next meeting.

The address for the evening, by Mr. James Lloyd of Dedham College, read by J. W. Carrington, Esq., gave a topographical view of Long Island, some account of its history and biographical records, with brief sketches of many of its notable men of the past century.

Hanks E. Dawson, of New-York, will give the December paper on "The Battle of Long Island;" the paper for January will be on "Old Brooklyn and the old Clergy of Long Island;" for February, on "The Great Fires of Long Island," illustrated by maps. One of these extended forty miles, and consumed some million of dollars.

An able and brilliant course of six lectures, which Rev. John Lenz has given at Harvard, Yale and Amherst Colleges, with great success, on "The Ancient and Teutonic Civilizations," will be repeated before the Society in November and December, the first to be on this (Tuesday) evening, at the Chapel of the Packer Institute. The course, $1 50; to members, $1.

"People's Union" Nominations.

The party subjugating itself as the "People's Union" held Congressional Conventions last evening, or was supposed to.

In the Fourth District it was announced that delegates would meet at No. 114 Fulton-street; sought but outside and darkness was there. No. 141 B was thought might contain the controlling spirits of the Fourth; but the was all dark and closed, save in the basement, where a Tractor kept a "station," and he knew nothing of conventions. The meeting in the Fourth was a farce or fraud, probably a mixture of both.

In the Fifth District delegates met at Lincoln Hall, corner of Allen and Houston streets, and nominated the following gentlemen: Thomas R. Swanson, of the Tenth Ward; Henry Shearer, of the Thirteenth Ward, and Amos Benedict, of the Twenty-fourth Ward. The meeting then adjourned until next Monday, when the three other candidates will be nominated.

The delegates of the Sixth District met at No. 639 Broadway, and nominated William Hooper, of the Alexander Hamilton, of the Ninth Ward; Wm. Hepburn, Philemon Ward, John H. Pettit, Sixteenth Ward; William B. Ogden and Albert Rotmann, Eighteenth Ward.

The delegates of the Seventh District met at Stevens' Hall, Broadway and Forty-seventh-street, organized and adjourned without making any nominations until Saturday evening.

THE MEXICAN QUESTION.—Mr. C. S. Sheafman, of the New-York Press, lectures this evening on the Invasion of Mexico, at Bedworth's Hall, No. 663 Broadway. Gen. Sickles, the Hon. Hamilton Fish, Gen. Thos. F. Meagher and others will be present. If the lecture be half as eloquent as it was in Brooklyn, the hall will be crowded in every part.

KINGS COUNTY CIRCUIT COURT—Tuesday Nov. 10.—Nos. 22, 19, 18, 20, 24, 25, 27, 28, 29, 31, 32, 33, 34, 36, 37, 38, 39, 40, 101, 103, 105.

The Lower-Canada Gold Mines.

[Correspondence of The Times.]

QUEBEC, Thursday, Nov. 4, 1863.

The gold washed out from the which have pre-[illegible] expectations of the [illegible] Miners on the Chaudiere River, and the speculation connected with lands near the "diggings," still continues. A New-York company have bought about 60,000 acres in the neighborhood of the gold yield, and intend to commence operations of an extensive character in the Spring; other combinations in Boston have a similar object in view, and it will not surprise me to see five or ten thousand hirelings at work next year, with quartz-crushing machines and hydraulic apparatus for getting the precious metal out of the matrix. A man named Thompson lately found a nugget weighing two pounds—the heaviest yet discovered. If there should be labor of this character, our miners would pay handsomely.

It is necessary, however, that the Times, while publishing news in reference to the Chaudiere, should caution speculators against purchasing stocks in gold mining companies without proper vigilance, especially at this time, when so many schemes are pushed upon the market. The questions of title to the lands are complex, and many lands are advertised as for sale "in the vicinity of the mines," which are not so much as indications of gold upon them. Again, the capital of several of the gold mining and other mineral companies are set down at too high a figure. For instance, the Acton mine (copper) was bought for $200,000, and stock to the amount of $1,000,000 put upon it—of course, the idea is for a good dividend. Other companies are following this example, perhaps enough is too. There can, however, be little reasonable doubt that there are immense mineral resources in this region, and that satisfactory returns will be realized from them within a few years—the difficulty being, as in most other mercantile affairs, to discriminate between good and bad ventures.

A VISIT TO THE CITY OF CHURCHES.—Last week, prompted calling us to the "City of Churches," we paid Dr. Rowe, the Resident Oculist and Aurist of Brooklyn, a visit at his residence, No. 42 Concord-street. While there, we saw a little boy who had been cross-eyed from infancy, that was operated on successfully, his eye, which previous to the operation was very badly crossed, being after it perfectly straight. This was the son of Mr. Roman Szepanski, of No. 289 Jay-street, Brooklyn.

A lady from Bergen, N. J., who had been deaf from infancy, and afflicted with a persistent discharge from the ear, caused catarrh in a very bad form, had been so far cured that she could hear conversation in a very low tone of voice. The discharge, she said, had entirely stopped, and that disagreeable ringing and discharge from the head caused from catarrh had entirely ceased. Consequent upon this, her general health had wonderfully improved. From being previously delicate, she had become quite robust.

During our visit, many others called, afflicted with deafness, diseases of the eye, throat, and catarrh—some of whom were sufficiently well to be discharged, while others were in a fair way of being so before long. From all with whom we conversed, we found universal satisfaction at the benefit they were derriving. One lady said she had not for many years enjoyed a good night's rest, from the constant dripping of the catarrhal mucous into her throat, necessitating her frequently to be up during the night to relieve her throat, until she had placed herself under Dr. Rowe's care. Now, she said, she slept, as we saw she did, "like a top." A rather curious case was a gentleman who had been afflicted for many years with a very sore upper lip—so much so, that for eighteen months he had never been able to allow a razor to touch it, but was obliged to keep the hair cropped short. So sore had it become, that it was quite gray-red. In vain had he consulted the most eminent physicians, all of whom pronounced it "Barber's Itch," and was treated accordingly for it, with a different consequence resulting no benefit, but making rather matters worse. As a last resort, he applied to Dr. Rowe, who, on examination, soon discovered that it was caused from the acrid discharge from catarrh, which had excoriated the lip. The gentleman is not only cured of his catarrhal difficulty, but, to use his own words, enjoys a clean shave every morning.

The names of some of the parties hereinmentioned we have omitted, not having asked their permission to use them, and not knowing whether they would like their name used.—New-York Dispatch.

HEAR.

HARLEM, July 20, 1863.

I have been deaf for over TWENTY-FIVE YEARS, and Dr. VON EISENBERG operated on both of my ears without the slightest pain—a thing that I could not believe could be done. I now hear well, and feel as I never felt for the last twenty years. The dexterity and skill with which the operation was performed evince the highest practical ability. I hear perfectly. It is now over a month since the operation, and I continue to feel as well as ever.

WILLIAM LIDDLE, Harlem, 126th-st., between 2d and 3d-avs.

CATARRH CURED.

NEW-YORK, Aug. 25, 1863.

I have been suffering for the last three years from a severe Catarrh, with a continual fullness in my head, a tightness across my chest, a weight over my eyes, which were weak, watery and very painful. My nostrils were continually obstructed with a pouring of fluid. I have had frequent coughing, hoarseness of my voice, generally attended with spitting, often with a fullness of my throat, together with a soreness and a dropping. Dr. VON EISENBERG has cured me of all these disagreeable sufferings. I now feel a new life. The treatment of Dr. VON EISENBERG is so skillful, so it is successful; it is impossible to overrate the benefit I have received at his hands. I heartily recommend any one suffering like myself to place themselves under Dr. VON EISENBERG'S care, with a certainty of being speedily cured. I give this with gratitude and pleasure. I cannot forbear again saying that my voice, which was hoarse and thick when I applied to Dr. VON EISENBERG, is now clear and good; indeed, I feel absolutely saturated.

JAMES LITTLE, No. 265 7th-st., New-York.

New-York, Sept. 8.

I have been suffering for years past from a severe Catarrh, with a great heaviness over my eyes, with a severe depression, great soreness, and pain in my head, great difficulty in breathing, and a continual accumulation in my nostrils, which gave me restless nights for several years. I have consulted several physicians, who pronounced me to be incurable. What I suffered for so long a time is indescribable. My system was entirely disorganized and greatly debilitated. I not only felt weak, but I had a cloud continually before my eyes, and my ears were so affected that I was threatened with a total loss of hearing. I must say, I think, I was guided by Providence to come to Dr. VON EISENBERG, who not only cured me of my Catarrh by removing an astonishing quantity of disagreeable matter from my head, but restored me to perfect health, a blessing I have not enjoyed for many years. Now I enjoy a good night's rest, and pursue my business with comfort. I must acknowledge that Dr. VON EISENBERG'S mild and scientific treatment for Catarrh deserves the highest commendation, as the principle which directs his system of curing Catarrh is such as to render success certain.

JAMES FURLONG, No. 555 2d-av.

No. 124 ALLEN-st., NEW-YORK, Feb. 9, 1863.

I have been completely deaf in one ear, and partially so in the other, for above seventeen years, with a disagreeable discharge from both ears, combined with continual rumbling noise in the head, for which I have been treated by a most eminent practitioner in the City without the slightest relief.

I consulted Dr. VON EISENBERG, but I must candidly say that I had no faith in his system when I did so. It is, therefore, due to Dr. VON EISENBERG to acknowledge that I am entirely cured; also, that he displayed that skill and knowledge which have procured for him such an unrivaled reputation. As I have had an opportunity of comparing his mode of treatment with that of others, I can truly state that it is not only superior, but the principles which direct his mode of restoring the hearing are, in my opinion, certain.

JOHN TAYLOR.

NEW-YORK, July 20, 1863.

This certifies that my mother has been for some time afflicted with partial deafness, suffering from pain, and rumbling noises in the head, together with other indications of a total loss of hearing. Dr. VON EISENBERG removed from her ears a great quantity of matter, together with coagulated blood, relieving her instantaneously, and all without pain. He will gratefully thanks that I give this testimony to his skill.

CARROLL J. POST, No. 22 South-st.

SIGHT RESTORED.

JUNE 26, 1863.

My daughter brought me to Dr. VON EISENBERG almost completely blind in both eyes. I could not hear the pain nor the light. I am completely cured by Dr. VON EISENBERG, and called now to express my gratitude to the Doctor for his skill and unremitting attention, by which I recovered one of the most precious senses to me after being deprived of it for four years. It is only due to Dr. VON EISENBERG to state that I have tried several physicians in vain. I shall be happy to bear personal testimony to Dr. VON EISENBERG'S unrivaled success to any lady or gentleman who will call on me.

HUGH GILLON, No. 75 Fulton-st., Brooklyn.

CHRONIC CATARRH CURED.

READ.

NEW-YORK, March 20, 1863.

"This is to certify, that I have suffered from very severe CHRONIC CATARRH, with a dull heaviness in the head. I felt my nose completely stopped up accompanied by continual soreness of the throat, the chills stealing over me with occasional hot flashes, a great tightness of the chest and pain, so much so, that every one thought it was consumption. Having heard of the great cures performed by Dr. VON EISENBERG, I consulted him with but little hope of a cure. I am now happy to be enabled to add my testimonial to the great number already in the Doctor's possession, as to his scientific and successful mode of treatment, as he has shown in my case that skill and knowledge which have procured for him so great a reputation. I am so entirely restored to perfect health that I do most sincerely recommend all sufferers from CHRONIC CATARRH and SORE THROAT to apply at once to Dr. VON EISENBERG with a certainty of being cured."

THE THREE REMEDIES.

Dr. J. H. SCHENCK, of Philadelphia, one of the most distinguished medical retreats of the age, is the inventor of three medicines which have secured to him a reputation and well-merited reputation. These articles are "Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup," "Schenck's Sea Weed Tonic," and "Schenck's Mandrake Pills," each of which is proved to be a medicine of surprising efficacy in the cure of disease which physicians in general acknowledge to be incurable, or quite, beyond the reach of the syringe. Many extraordinary cures of Pulmonary and Bronchial Consumption have been made by Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup, the utility of which was first tested in the case of Dr. Schenck himself, who, more than thirty years ago, was abandoned by his physicians as incurable, all of the most alarming symptoms of Consumption, in its most desperate stage, having present, and he was given up to die. Dr. S. was restored to perfect health. The Sea Weed Tonic and Mandrake Pills are prescribed by him to auxiliary remedies in consumptive cases, or they may be used with great advantage in all cases wherein strengthening and purgative medicines are required. The testimony of many reputable persons is given to show that these three medicines have performed some of the most extraordinary cures on record.

Dr. SCHENCK can only be found at his rooms No. 15 Bond-st., New-York, every Tuesday from 9 A. M. to 3 P. M., for consultation and advice, but his medicines can be obtained at all times.

The Citizens' Association of the XVIIth Ward and of Essex No. 20 Cooper Institute, on Monday evening, Nov. 9, for the purpose of making arrangements for the ensuing Charter election. The President of the Association, Dr. Wm. Hitchcock, occupied the Chair, and Messrs. Gilbert E. Underhill and George Arthur acted as Secretaries.

On motion of Mr. Schuyler, the following preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Whereas, This Association, two years ago, nominated GEORGE A. JEREMIAH for nomination as candidate for Alderman of the Sixth District, which nomination was afterward indorsed by various political organizations and our candidate was elected by an unparalleled majority; and,

Whereas, the official course of Alderman JEREMIAH, during the entire term, has proved the wisdom of our selection of a candidate; and while we congratulate the citizens of the District on having represented in the Board of Aldermen one who for two years is a gentleman of ability and incorruptible integrity, we deem it desirable that the services of Alderman JEREMIAH should be retained in that body; therefore,

Resolved, That this Association unanimously nominate Hon. GEORGE A. JEREMIAH, as a candidate for Alderman of the IIIth Aldermanic District, and earnestly recommend him to the support of our fellow-citizens.

It was, on motion, further

Resolved, That the officers of this meeting be a Committee to notify Alderman JEREMIAH of his nomination and request his acceptance.

On motion, Resolved, That a Committee of ten be appointed by the Chair to make selections of cute individuals for Congressional and school officers, and report the same to the Association.

On motion, Resolved, That a Committee of ten be appointed by the Chair to superintend the printing and distribution of the tickets, and arrange the details of the election.

On motion, adjourned until Friday next, 11th inst., at 7½ o'clock.

ELECTRICITY.

DR. HYDE,
MEDICAL ELECTRICIAN,
NO. 419 4TH-AV., NEW-YORK.
Office hours from 9 A. M. to 4 P. M., and from 7 to 8 P. M.

FROM MRS. C. NEWCOMB.

NEW-YORK, March 7, 1863.

DR. HYDE—Dear Sir: It affords me much pleasure to contribute my testimony in favor of your new mode of applying electricity, which, in my case, has resulted far beyond my most sanguine expectations. After having been under the treatment of nine different physicians within the last three years, during which time I was gradually growing from a state of voice, mind had become despaired of ever speaking aloud again. I was induced to try your new mode, and, strange to say, after the sixth or seventh application, my voice returned, and I now feel that I am restored to the enjoyment of life and society, to which I have been comparatively a stranger. I will add that I had previously tried electricity applied in the ordinary way, but without any relief. With the hope that others similarly unfortunate may receive the benefit, you are at liberty to refer any person to me, at No. 4 Hubert-st. MRS. C. NEWCOMB.

FROM G. S. WASHBURN, ESQ., OF MCKEAN, PENN.

MCKEAN, PENN., July 14, 1863.

DR. H. T. HYDE—Dear Sir: I send you a statement of the effect of electricity upon myself, with permission to use it for the benefit of others if you desire so to do. For thirteen years I have been afflicted with the asthma, and during that time I have lost, but few days, months, in which I did not suffer with a paroxysm that entirely prostrated me for four or five days, and sometimes longer, until I had become very down by disease. In a bad attack I have set up for nourishment nearly in succession. The least active exercise would bring it on. About the 1st of March last I placed myself under your care, and almost immediately I felt like a different being. I have gained over twenty pounds in weight, and am able to do considerable work. It has also improved my general health, and gives me a greater power of endurance than I ever had. Yours truly, G. S. WASHBURN.

NOTICE.
To the Stockholders of the New-York and Harlem Railroad Company:
The increasing business of the Company and anticipated connections with other Railroads render it expedient forthwith to extend the double track from its present terminus at Williams Bridge to Eighteen Foot Corners, and to construct the road from that place through to Albany.
For the purpose of meeting the necessary outlays attending such construction, and the various other expenditures incident to the extension of the City Railroad already authorized, the Board of Directors have unanimously decided it is expedient to increase the Capital Stock to such amount, not exceeding the limitation of the Charter, as may be sanctioned by the requisite vote of the Stockholders, and to issue the increased stock from time to time as may be required for the purposes of completing such double track and extensions and procuring the necessary additional rolling stock.
The amount of the Capital Stock, as limited by the Charter and Amendatory Acts, is $3,000,000, of which the Board of Directors have authorized the issue of $1,500,000, of which two millions one hundred and thirty-nine thousand nine hundred and fifty dollars remained unissued.
The Board of Directors propose that the Capital Stock be increased to its full amount.
A meeting of the Stockholders for the purpose of acting upon such resolution of the Board of Directors and of carrying into effect the increase of Capital Stock to the full amount authorized by the Charter and the provisions of the Legislature, extraordinary thereto, will be held at the Office of the Company, at the corner of 26th-st. and 4th-av., on TUESDAY, the 1st day of December next, at 12 o'clock noon of that day.
For the purpose of ascertaining the Stockholders who shall be entitled to vote at said meeting, the Books of Transfer will be closed, as required by law, on Saturday, the 7th day of November inst., the day of the first publication of this notice.
The Books will be open on Tuesday, the 10th day of November inst.

FREEDMAN'S RELIEF MEETING.

General Grant Acting in their Behalf.

STATEMENT OF CHAPLAIN FISKE.

Speeches by Rev. Drs. Tyng, Hitchcock and Bellows, and Gen. Sickles.

According to announcement, a meeting was held in the large hall of the Cooper Institute last evening, under the auspices of the National Freedmen's Relief Association, in behalf of the suffering contrabands in the Department of the Mississippi. That speedy and effectual measures might be taken to improve their condition and prevent future suffering, Gen. GRANT sent Rev. A. S. FISKE, Chaplain and Superintendent of Contrabands in his Department, to represent to the people of the North the destitute condition of these people, and to solicit means to provide for the comfort of the wives and children of the freedmen now in the Army of the United States. The meeting was not only large in point of numbers, but there seemed to be a depth and earnestness of feeling pervading the assembly indicative of sympathy for the sufferers and a willingness to contribute for the alleviation of their distress.

The presiding officer was Rev. Dr. TYNG, who, after prayer by Rev. Dr. FOX, of Cincinnati, in a few pertinent remarks stated the object of their assembling. He said further, that the victories of our armies had given to this Government an immense power, and we had seen that the man who was at the helm of the ship of State was enabled to maintain his position, however the winds might rave and the waves beat around the vessel. (Applause.) He commented upon the recent elections, which, he said, had resulted in a great moral victory, perhaps more transcendent than the victories of Vicksburgh and Port Hudson or Gettysburgh. (Applause.) The principle upon which these elections had been conducted was that rebellion is Slavery and Slavery is rebellion, and in the destruction of Slavery the destruction of the rebellion would also be consummated. (Applause.) The feeling here was not altogether that of sympathy for the victims of Slavery, but also a feeling of self-defence. The time had come at last when there was no longer a feeling of leniency toward Slavery. And the man, the State, the party that would let it remain would go down, down where the hogs went into which the Saviour cast the devil. (Applause and laughter.) The labors of the Freedmen's Association had been confined to the Atlantic coast, and had been so far successful that they could not concede anything now except fostering and means for imparting instruction. But it was different in the Southwest. The able-bodied slaves were came to our lines were taken into the service of the United States, and Unconditional Surrender GRANT—he had heard that U. S. GRANT meant Unconditional Surrender GRANT—had sent Mr. FISKE, a Chaplain, to whom that General had the most entire confidence, to represent to them the condition of the freedmen of his department. The time had come when we could no longer look with contempt upon the negro. On the Southern battle-field he had shown his bravery, and demonstrated the justice of his claim to be considered a brother and fellow-citizen. (Applause.)

He then introduced Mr. FISKE, whose statement was substantially as follows:

STATEMENT OF REV. MR. FISKE.

After some complimentary allusions to Northern patriotism and benevolence, he proceeded to say that the blacks were inevitably our wards from the moment we accepted the sword as the defender of the Constitution. (Applause.) While yet prejudice and hatred, and pride were repelling them from our lines, long before we accepted them, they came swarming to us with thanksgiving and songs of jubilee, and were our scouts, whether we would or no. As servants, they were bearing our armies' burdens; as guides, were leading our scouts and reconnoissances; as spies, bringing otherwise impossible information to our Generals; and by an instinct and power of endurance were gathering in companies and camps all along our lines, while yet our lines were sealed against them. Three-fourths of all who are now a burden upon the country would have been as safe in any conceivable line of governmental well policy. The proclamation of liberty had led many of the able-bodied and serviceable, who would else have been driven to the interior, to make their escape to our lines and so swelled greatly the number of those who are and will be doing good service in our armies.

The speaker stated that there were not less than fifty thousand blacks upon the banks of the Mississippi, from among whom had been pulled every able-bodied man for the military service. This sable throng was composed of women, children and the infirm. They rested in crowded camps, sheltered by leaky tents whose tatters flutter in every breeze. They were fed by the Government a cheap ration, unserviceable military clothing being supplied to some extent to the infirm men. Officers, until recently Chaplains, were detailed for their care. They were clothed in just that apparel in which months ago they fled from their masters. He should have come hard things to any of officers and soldiers in our army, but mention to them all let him—the incident, unpretending hero of Vicksburgh—stand spotless as ever. (Great applause.) He early overcame all the prejudice of education and training, and had stood the black man's friend. All that he could do he had done, nobly, liberally. By his order, every step for their care and the supply of their necessities had been taken. The honor of his action in these affairs should brighten forever the laurels of his imperishable name. This patriot here should be greeted, as he lived on through the ages of the world's history, as not only great but good.

The speaker proceeded to detail several scenes of suffering and injustice which had passed before his eyes previously to his being detailed to the care of the contrabands. He said that the key to all their destitution in these camps was to be found in the method of their coming in. They came from plantations from which everything had been stripped. Our armies this Summer and autumn subsisted on all forms of supply. The blacks could not remain behind. Their only chance was to come to the river with the army, or flee further into the interior. They chose the former, of course, and so came in by long marches, without transportation for anything, in utter destitution. What could you ask a mother, with a babe in her arms and another clinging to her skirts, to believe to the shelter of her children during the winter? And they came in, through weary nights of flight and days of hiding; blessed if they could but escape with their dearest treasures safe. Oftentimes the father came alone, with the cries of wife and children ringing in his ears, as they were seized and born back—to what? God knows, and he—this thing wonderfully imitative, but no man—would go back by-and-bye to try again, with and for them that fear not flight; or another would come with her babe alone—you could hardly ask why she did not bring her bed and blankets and clothing for their shelter during all the months. The blacks of Jeff. and Jos DAVIS came in back of Vicksburgh in June last, in great destitution. BLANKETS were distributed among them, the gift of the Sanitary Commission, by the speaker's own hand, as they were lying in their hammocks, with nothing between them and the cold earth, neither roof nor tent and the clear sky. They came in with tattered rags and goods, but the best were taken by the army, and their goods lost at the outpoints of our forces miles away. So they came in in utter destitution.

The speaker then proceeded to illustrate—by scenes of which he was eye-witness—the bitterness of hatred and abuse to which they had been subjected at the hands of soldiers, the lower sort of citizens, and not infrequently of officers in the service. His experience had been with the troops of Southern Indiana and Illinois. Troops from other Western States had behaved far differently, and of late, since the arming of the blacks and their approved usefulness in all departments of the service, this abuse and contempt had ceased nearly altogether. Indeed, the army in no portion of it had gone down so far as the depth to which Northern feeling had sunk in this matter. The black had always been safer in Memphis than sometimes in Chicago, Buffalo, or the commercial metropolis of our nation.

Out of an average number of four thousand under his charge at Memphis during the months of February, March and April, of the present year, there died during that time twelve hundred. Three-fourths of them had no change of raiment—probably one-fourth of the women had but one garment between them—neither shoe nor stocking. Many children were kept night and day rolled in the poor blanket of a family—the sole apparel. They had multitudes of chronic sore heads. There were no floors in their leaky tents, and no chairs for them. The wonder is, not that so many died, but that so many lived.

What should be done with them? The men were to be enlisted by a hundred and twenty-five thousand one in the military service either at labor or at arms. They make good soldiers; took discipline easily; were not appalled at sights of blood; carry cool and brave. They could not be sent North. They should not come. They could not be sent out of the country. They would not go, and the country could not spare them. They could not be remanded to their masters. Many of them were trained to arms; many had tasted liberty—power through a baptism of suffering and almost death for liberty, and incomparably for relenlistment. Ultimately but one course was possible. We must not cast this race a helpless waif upon the sea of political corruption. Drop him out of that ill, according to some wisely fixed standard of virtuous intelligence, he could hear himself well in political affairs, but he could hear himself well in political affairs, but guarantee him his rights as a free man—his right to sell his labor in the best market—his right to wife and child—his right to learn what use other men have to do what he knows how to do—to own and inherit all forms of property; and we might not trouble statesmen or politicians about his future. Do simple justice. God and events ask no more. Do else than so, and God would use us to fit that all our plans fail! The suffering of this people is our national dishonor. If they were not rescued, history would write something thus: "Two American people enticed within their lines tens of thousands of slaves, allurING them thither with promise of liberty, took from among them all able-bodied men to reinforce their armies, herded the rest together in great camps, and left them to perish of nakedness by the hundred!" How will that page of history read? The tidings of their sufferings had gone back to the Confederacy till these people had ceased to come in as eagerly as they did. If it ever proved possible for the South to arm her blacks against us, it would be by reason of the sufferings of those who had reached our lines. Perhaps, with the baleful light of this too well attested fact, he might be led to strive for his liberty in arms against us.

The speaker closed with an earnest appeal to all lovers of humanity and all patriots to move for their immediate relief.

Dr. HITCHCOCK said that he would not leave the platform without saying a word, and perhaps the best word he could say was that his friend Dr. BELLOWS was to speak. (Laughter.) He had faith that the one thing which the American people required in order to induce them to contribute was information; when this was obtained they would give generously of their substance for the relief of the suffering freedmen of the South. He knew that this people could not march on to victory but except through justice. (Applause.) This problem had been committed to us for solution, through no human sagacity or want of human sagacity. Slavery had not been the victim of accumulation, it was the victim of caution. (Applause.)

At this stage of the proceedings Gen. SICKLES entered, and was received with three hearty cheers.

The speaker said that the blacks were willing to work for us, to fight for us, to lock themselves in solid phalanx to break through whatever opposed the Government. All they asked was honest wages for honest work, and sustenance for their suffering wives and children. We should be just to them. If we were not, the artillery of Divine retribution would be playing into our ground ranks. (Applause.)

At the conclusion of Dr. HITCHCOCK's remarks, the plates for contributions were passed. In the meantime, the following preamble and resolutions were read and adopted:

Whereas, Rev. A. S. FISKE, Chaplain and Superintendent of Contrabands, by direction of Maj.-Gen. GRANT, has made a statement of the extreme suffering of the freedmen in the Department of the Mississippi; and,

Whereas, A similar appalling state of things is known to exist in other localities, embracing in all about five hundred thousand freedmen; therefore,

Resolved, That the National Freedmen's Relief Association is called upon to enlarge its humane work, and to make an earnest effort to raise for the immediate relief of these suffering people one hundred thousand dollars.

Resolved, That we implore our citizens—merchants, manufacturers, all classes—to give instant and liberal aid to these poor people; that the gentlemen composing the Chamber of Commerce, Board of Brokers, Cotton Exchange, and other associations, be requested to take such steps as they deem advisable to aid the suffering parents, wives and children of the colored soldiers conscripted for the army.

Resolved, That we invoke the aid of the clergy, and that we, in mass meeting, hereby request each pastor to act as a Committee to bring the matter before his congregation, for the purpose of taking collections for these sufferers.

Resolved, As the objects of this charity are, to a great extent, women and children, that we call upon the women of our land to aid this cause by their needles, fairs, parlor entertainments, and by personal efforts among their friends.

Dr. BELLOWS followed in a few eloquent and pointed remarks, the substance of which is embodied in the following resolutions, which he prepared, and which were unanimously adopted by the meeting:

Resolved, 1. That a Committee of thirteen citizens, be forthwith selected by the National Freedmen's Relief Society, be appointed to represent this meeting in a deputation to the President of the United States, asking him to call on Congress in his next Message to create a Bureau of Emancipation, whose duty it shall be, at the expense of the nation, to superintend the transition of the freedmen committed by the President's Proclamation, and otherwise provided for, in their condition from a state of compulsory labor to a condition of self-supporting industry.

Resolved, 2. That this same Committee be charged with the more immediate duty of calling on our citizens for subscriptions to meet the pressing wants of our freedmen on the Mississippi, whose sufferings we have just heard described, and that an effort be made by them for a simultaneous collection in our churches on the Sunday preceding our National Thanksgiving; that the money raised be paid to the Treasurer of the National Freedmen's Relief Association, and be disbursed at their discretion.

being loudly called for by the audience, came forward and said he was very glad to have an opportunity to contribute his humble assistance to Gen. GRANT, a great commander, in the solution of one of the administrative difficulties of his department, and also to evince his earnest sympathy with the object which had brought together so large an assemblage of the worth and intelligence of New-York. He very much regretted that his health was not sufficiently restored to justify him in attempting anything more than a brief acknowledgment of the kind invitation which brought him thither, and the expression of his good wishes for the measures they had adopted in behalf of the freedmen. The destiny of the millions who would be elevated to freedom by the proclamation was one of the greatest questions of the times. It was a delusion to suppose that that decree would ever be revoked. (Applause.) He perhaps was one who, if he had been consulted, would have hesitated to advise the measure. But he was one of those who, it having been done, would maintain it. (Renewed applause.) That measure, as they had seen and as had been so eloquently developed to them, brought with it great responsibilities, not only upon the Government but upon the people. Thousands and thousands of the emancipated had gone into the army as soldiers. In this respect he felt a peculiar interest in them and their kindred. They had won the respect of the army by their courage and devotion. It could not be long before a hundred thousand African soldiers would be in arms for the Union (great applause) and they and their kindred—those who were dependent upon them—were entitled to the same benevolent regard that other soldiers of the Union had received from the people. (Applause.) If the war was for emancipation, as many asserted, then surely it was right that the enfranchised race should share the sacrifices of the struggle. If it was not emancipation—if it was for the restoration of the Union as it was—then surely we must all admire the unselfish heroism which prompted them to give their lives in a struggle to which they were strangers. (Applause.) No pains should be spared to remove the disquietude which existed in the minds of the white laboring masses of the North and South as to the practical effect of emancipation upon them. Popular sentiment in the country had been swayed against the war in no inconsiderable degree by the apprehension that emancipation would depreciate wages and degrade white labor. They all knew that there could be no greater error than this; but while the error lasted, (and it prevailed to a lamentable extent,) there could be no greater misfortune; he did not come to make an address; his strength would not admit of it. One word more, and he would take his leave. The important exigency to be considered—the sad condition of many thousands who had liberty without homes, freedom without bread or raiment—might be disposed of by temporary expedients. For that purpose no agency could be better than that of the Sanitary Commission, that good angel of the Union army, which brought to the battle-field the gifts of the good, represented by its venerable President then with them. (Applause.) When the President of the United States issued his proclamation, he invoked for it the blessing of Heaven, as a means of suppressing the rebellion. The most imposing event in our history, let us trust—our efforts for the restoration of tranquillity and order—would be guided by the inspirations of a kind Providence. We had to reconcile interests with duty, policy with humanity, hopes with destiny. (Loud applause.)

The President announced the meeting adjourned, and the assembly dispersed.

OLD ABE'S LAST.—"When I was in New-York," said he, "I was accosted one afternoon by a most gentlemanly person, who offered to sell me certain things I declined buying. A lively argument ensued, during which I received knocks on the head. I never was so hotly treated, for I never resented, or pointed, 'The knocks,' he added, with a grin, "was a KNOX HAT." There was, as usual, a good deal of truth hidden in this anecdote of Old Abe's. Such KNOX on the head are not only agreeable, but individualize the wearer as a man of excellent taste and bon ton.
